Pontarlier Town Map

Pontarlier to Sainte-Croix 23.3 km

Route Summary: this is a strenuous section climbing to 1152 metres. The initial climb and descent can be avoided by remaining on the unpleasant N57 for 5.5 kilometres - cyclists may prefer this option. For those taking the off-road option the prize is a great view of Château de Joux from above. After the routes rejoin, the route follows the D6 on a steady climb to the border post and eventually the Col des Etroits before commencing the descent to Sainte-Croix. A Grand Randonnée route connects Frambourg to les Fourgs, but it has shown to be overgrown and extremely difficult for all groups. There are tourist facilities in each village along the D6.

Sainte-Croix to Orbe 37.7 km

Sainte-Croix to Orbe 37.7 km

Route Summary: this is a long section but offers the opportunity to either reduce the length by bypassing Yverdon-les-Bains or break the section at Yverdon. Through Switzerland Route 70 of the Swiss Mobility network connects Saint-Croix to the Col Grand-Saint-Bernard. We will follow this route where it does not impose unnecessary risks or add unnecessary distance. After the descent to Vuiteboeuf the route generally follows broad farm and forest tracks and some minor roads.

Distance from Canterbury: 866 km Distance to Rome: 1217 km

Ascent: 346m

Descent: 973m

Villeneuve to Martigny 40.2 km

Signs to Look Out For

Villeneuve to Martigny 40.2 km

Route Summary: this very long section generally follows pleasant pathways on the side of the canal and then on the banks of the Rhone. Saint Maurice offers the opportunity for an intermediate stop, after which there is a short rugged section through the Bois Noir before returning to level tracks and minor roads passing beside the apricot orchards on the entry to Martigny. Route 70 passes directly through Aigle but hugs the base of the hills first on the east and then the western side of the valley adding distance and unnecessary climbing In Martigny. Look out for: Roman archaeological remains. The city is known for its amphitheatre, restored in 1978. Cow fights are held in the amphitheatre during early autumn for the "Comptoir". The city is also famous for its museum, the Pierre Gianadda Foundation, built on top of Roman ruins. The foundation hosts three painting exhibitions every year, with works by renowned masters. It also has permanent automobile and Gallo-Roman exhibitions.

Martigny to Orsières 20.2 km

Route Summary: after leaving Martigny the route takes to a narrow track with steep ascents. This section is forbidden to horse-riders and cyclists. Forest tracks connect Bovernier and Sembrancher. After Sembrancher there is the choice of Route 70 on the right side of the valley or the very quiet roads and tracks we prefer on the left.

Orsières to Great St. Bernard Pass Summit 24.9 km

Route Summary: the off-road route is generally a steady, but continuous climb to the summit with short steeper sections. The route bypasses the intermediate towns and so walkers need to be well prepared. Horse riders and mountain bikers can use parts of the route but will need to divert to avoid the steepest and narrowest sections. Options are provided for each group to leave the off-road route and join the on-road section. Be sure to check the weather before departure.
